

CHAPTER VI

CONCLUSION

6.1. Conclusions

Based on the results and several process in implementing this project, there are some conclusions :

1. Java language able to build a simple client server network.
2. Implements a client server and client to client network need threads and sockets.

6.2. Further Research

Based on the process in building this project, possible further developments is porting this project into the browser and into the Android application. Make it more easier to use and more accessible in more different platforms. Adding more feature in Server such as editing and deleting data will make this program more reliable in the future.