

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

Based on the findings discussed in chapter 4, some conclusion can be made. First, for 14 items out of 15 respondents have favorable attitude. They believe that by sending their children to immersion program, some benefits can be gained. Not only their English but also their knowledge can increase because of the English language. Only one item shows that the respondents have unfavorable (item6) because it gives negative impacts on their children. However, all the data show that respondents of this study have favorable attitude as the means of all the items are above three with the lowest 3.3. It seems that most parents under the study have high expectation on immersion program. They believe that their children English language competence will be better by studying in immersion program. Besides, their knowledge also improves as they can communicate in English better.

From the interview with five respondents, it can be highlighted some points which support the idea that English language is important and can prepare for the bright future. The five questions given to the answer in the interview support the result of the English.

SUGGESTION

The data was taken from 50 respondents. Therefore, the writer suggests that another study on parents' beliefs can be done with bigger number of respondents, and a group discussion forum can be chosen to collect more data
