

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

From the analysis, there are several points that can be concluded. Those points are answering the problem formulation of this thesis. There are three big points as a conclusion:

A. Archetype

1. Persona

Hillary's persona shows her mask when she face the public, she hides the problem which happens to her from other people.

- This persona is used because she wants to save her behavior from the public. That is why she needs safety needs.
- Then Hillary hides her bad behavior because she wants to get respect from other people to affect her. This connects to esteem needs.

2. Anima and Animus

Hillary is an animus person because she is a woman who is influenced by a man behavior. Her animus is influenced by Gary, a man who loves her.

- Hillary's animus connects to esteem needs because she needs Gary's respect to affect her from her past bad behavior.

- This animus also connects to the belonging and loves needs because Hillary needs Gary to accept her as a woman who loves him.
- Then it also connects to physiological needs because Hillary's life experience shows that Hillary and Gary have sex. Sex is a kind of physiological needs.

3. Shadow

The shadows is used as a way to reveal Hillary's bad behaviors. She would often say "if onlys" to show her strength, although in reality she is weak. In other words, the shadow becomes her guidepost.

- Hillary needs her shadow to retrieve her safety needs. After showing her shadow, the people around her gives the care she needs and makes Hillary feels safe.
- Hillary also needs respect from others. With the shadow, she receives respect and affection from the people around her.

4. Self

The self shows Hillary's goal of self development. The self shows the differences of decision making before and after the maturity. The ways she solve the problem shows the development of her maturity. Hillary's maturity is shown when she meets her son.

- This connects to the self actualization because there is no more need besides meeting with her son and the affection from her son.

B. Mandala theory

The Mandala theory also connects to the hierarchy of human needs. Each type has different connectivity which depends on the relation of each. As the conclusion here, the writer finds that Hillary is a rational type because Hillary uses thinking type and feeling type more than the sensing type and intuition type.

C. Attitudes

The Attitudes also connects to the hierarchy of human needs. Each type has different connectivity depending on the relation of each. As the conclusion here, the writer finds that Hillary is an extroversion type because Hillary uses extroversion type more than introversion type.
