

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

1.1 Conclusion

There are many factors that influence the powerful and powerless speaker like number interruption, number of turn, number of longest turn, and number of the change of conversational topic. Based on analysis, female presenters of Insert Infotainment had the big number of interruption, turn, longest turn, and topic change. It means that female presenters of Insert Infotainment were more powerful than male presenter.

In each episode female presenters of Insert Infotainment held the power of conversation, in Episode 1 and 4 female presenters had more percentage compared to male presenters. However, in Episode 2, 3 and 5 female presenters got percentage result almost the same with male presenters. The total interruption, turn, longest turn and topic change done by male presenters in whole episodes is 40.64% and female presenters 59.36%. It means male presenters of Insert Infotainment also held power in specific part for example in Episode 5, the male presenter held power in term of topic change. From the analysis, female presenters of Insert Infotainment always dominate the term of longest turn. It means they were powerful in that term. It happens because female presenters of Insert Infotainment had more experience and knowledge so they could talk more than male presenters of Insert Infotainment. Because of the result of this analysis told us that female presenters of Insert Infotainment were more powerful than male presenters of Insert Infotainment, it leads to Carter's statement not Saville-Troike's statement.

5.2 Suggestion

The writer realized that the research had some limitations. Thus, the writer proposes some suggestion for better research in future. First because of limited time, the writer did not have more videos and the episodes were not in series. Not all of the presenters of Insert Infotainment were served as example by the writer. The findings would be better if there were more data. Next since gossiping belongs to women features, male presenters had less knowledge than female presenters in gossiping, maybe male presenters should be up-to-date with the gossip news so the comparison between male in female presenter is not too far.

Another suggestion is female presenters in Insert Infotainment gave more opportunity to male presenters in Insert Infotainment to talk so male presenters in Insert Infotainment can talk more as well as female presenters. Furthermore it would be interesting to discuss about who is powerful and powerless speaker in other media and situation. By doing it so, different findings and more interesting phenomena dealing with the language in general may be obtained.

Finally the writer also suggests that this analysis of power between male and female presenters in Insert can be delivered in Sociolinguistics and Discourse Analysis class. The writer hope that this study will be additional knowledge for students to understand about the language, especially about power and domination in Infotainment.
