Message from the USC President

At its core business is not only about Creating and Managing Wealth, but equally about its Distribution; this perspective taken by University of San Carlos for its scholastic agenda is proving its worth even this early – we are gratified to note that the highest submission of papers at this ICBE in Semarang falls under the themes of Governance and Corporate Social Responsibility. The emphasis found echo even at the World Economic Forum at Davos (2019), where social entrepreneurship figured prominently.

The relevance of wealth redistribution cannot be gainsaid; there will always be a need to provide financial services to the “un-bankable”; to ensure healthcare access in the most under-resourced sites, to push for a circular economy with regard to plastics, to invent unconventional ways of scrubbing our polluted oceans, to envision solutions to migration and refugee populations, to name just a few. Today, however, Distribution has become an inevitably urgent agendum for society and government given the extremes we find of poverty and inequality. Efforts to bridge the gaps have to critique conventional frameworks and antiquated strategies given the global reach of the Fourth Industrial Revolution (FiRe). Certain constants, however, must be respected; no matter how innovative the solution integrating FiRe technologies, it cannot dispense with the logic of the market if it is to succeed.

Philosophically a useful way to wrap our heads around volatile, uncertain, complex, ambiguous (YUCA) issues is to isolate the underlying paradigms, core values and institutional norms of society, history and culture. Davos argues correctly that solutions must begin with conversation on the linchpin issues and transition to shaping architectures to match the global scale of the problems as requisite to forming functional partnerships to build a shared future in a common home. Semarang is justifiably focused on the restricted context of the ASEAN Economic Community, its conversation and cooperation shaped therewith by the contextual configurations of its economies and socio-cultural predilections.

Davos inevitably represents a First World perspective on what makes governance policy frameworks superior, or what inclusiveness means for employment, or how best to bridge the mismatch between skills training and job requirements, or maximizing the unrecognized potentials of differently-abled sectors and so on. Being less global and more regional, Semarang will inevitably reflect distinctive perspectives on its hierarchy of needs, urgencies of priorities, strategic directions, possibilities of cooperation and the like. In face of disruptive technologies and cultural reflexes, neither conference can sidestep the dilemma of gradual and evolutionary progress versus bold and dislocating innovation. Davos felt the need to “turbo-charge” Social Entrepreneurship impact through partnerships with global corporates, key governments and civil society organizations, and to showcase their cause through global media exposure. Semarang can only imagine as much as the rudimentary achievement of ASEAN will allow; still such a conversation and engagement can only be postponed at great cost. ASEAN Integration must at least catch up if not match Globalization 4.0; outdated mind-sets and incremental adjustments on existing processes and institutions may no longer suffice.

Davos underlined another worrisome problem. Not only must we contend with FiRe techs affecting business; we must more consciously attend to the impact of Globalization 4.0 – where for a variety of reasons substantial segments of society have become disaffected with politics and embittered by its economic underpinnings. Insecurity and frustration have themselves become globalized; strongman populism has become an attractive foil to the status quo. One analysis contends that the anti-elitist populist discourse confuses the mechanics of globalization with the politics of globalism. Globalization is the movement of ideas, people, and goods, a phenomenon driven by technology. Globalism is an ideology that prioritizes the neoliberal global order over national interests. Nobody is immune to globalization in some form; but we can opt for some of our national policies to be globalist in service of our interests. Nativism, nationalism, sovereignty, protectionism and even populism protect certain values; on the flip side they can frustrate cooperation, promote illiberalism, heighten tensions in a multipolar international order, and negate the common good of both the nation and of the region.

Ethically, threats to the quality of life as well as opportunities to improve the human condition must be rethought in the context of Globalization 4.0. Ready or not, a new world is upon us, forcing us... to return to the fundamental questions of human existence. Ethics reminds us that here the key is not technology per se, so much as our understanding of the good life for the human community as a whole, whose realization in turn depends on the choices we make at corporate, local, national, and international levels of governance. The challenge to Davos and Semarang is to initiate a conversation on new paradigms and core values based on classical wisdom but refashioned for the contemporary context. What are the new root causes of inequality today? How should we define the public good at various levels? How can we ethically harness FiRe technologies? How can we safeguard the public trust in an age of disruption?

At Davos the conversation was principally among business and government leaders. At Semarang the conversation will presumably be among academics mostly. Our hope is that they will also reflect on themselves and their role in this milieu of disruption and transformation. For government to manage change it must be assisted by the academe proposing new frameworks for analysis and construction. For workers to adapt and succeed, the academe must teach new skills. For society to survive the rigors of transitioning to a new world the academe must encourage a narrative of sharing and caring. To capitalize on new opportunities presenting themselves and avoid the disruptions we are witnessing even now, academe must take responsibility for its classical role of crafting philosophies that enable societies to methodically redesign their systems and institutions from the ground up. ICBE Semarang is a modest contribution to the dialog which can help create an ASEAN community of shared interest and purpose. In that spirit, then – to all who contributed to make this conference possible – our heartfelt gratitude.

Welcome delegates to the 5th International Conference on Business and Economy (ICBE) with the theme “Creating, Managing, and Distributing Wealth: Fulfilling the ASEAN Economic Community Goals. Unlike the last four conferences, the School of Business and Economics (SBE) of the University of San Carlos is co-organizing ICBE 2019 together with Universitas Katolik Soegijapranata (UNIKA) to be held on March 13-14, 2019 at the Noormans Hotel, Semarang, Central Java, Indonesia. We would like to thank UNIKA particularly Dr. Octavianus Digdo Hartomo, Dean of the Faculty of Economics and Business and former Dean Suciarto Sentot for successfully collaborating with USC to bring for the first time SBE’s home grown international academic conference to Indonesia.

The 4th ICBE continues the academic conversation and discussion on the overarching theme of Creating, Managing and Distributing Wealth. The last three years explored paradigm shifts, best practices and innovation in the context of the larger theme. This year’s conference will explore the ASEAN Economic Community goals juxtaposed with SBE's advocacy of not just creating and managing wealth but more importantly, distributing it to those who have less and are marginalized. SBE believes that economic growth does not automatically redound to development if issues of inequality and poverty continue to abound. SBE wish to contribute to steering business and economic researches that will explore and produce data that will support relevant policies that will address these issues.

We are happy to share that this international conference has close to 70 paper presentors spread over 10 break-out sessions. We would like to extend our heartfelt gratitude to all researchers who chose to submit their papers to ICBE 2019. We are humbled with your continued support and participation. As a school, SBE is indeed inspired to strengthen its lead as Center of Excellence in Business Administration, Entrepreneurship and office Administration and Center of Development in Hospitality & Tourism Management, a designation given by the Philippine Commission on Higher Education. Our Accountancy programs, on the other hand, is recognized as one of the top performing accountancy schools in the Philippines. And lastly, our Economics Department is the preferred research partner of national government agencies in the Visayas region. Because of all these accolades, we are proud to share that Eduniversal, a global ranking and rating agency specializing in higher education awarded the School of Business and Economics, University of San Carlos, One Palme of Excellence – Business School with Considerable Local Influence. Eduniversal has established strong expertise in evaluating academic institutions and programs in France since 1994, and internationally since 2007.

In behalf of the USC and UNIKA, we thank all who made this conference possible. Our heartfelt thank you once again to all researchers who chose to present their latest papers in ICBE 2019. May our collective efforts find facor with the Almighty and ultimately bring about the social impact that we hope to achieve.

Message from the Dean of Faculty of Economics and Business, Soegijapranata Catholic University

Ladies and Gentlemen, Good Morning!

Since 2015, the Faculty of Economics and Business Soegijapranata Catholic University had strong collaboration with School of Economics and Business University of San Carlos Cebu Philippines. This collaboration is conducted to anticipate globalization, especially in the era of the Asean Economics Community which has been launched since 2015. The implementation of the collaboration are: students and faculty exchange programs, joint research programs on green business and joint international conferences.

The 4th International Conference on Business and Economics held in Semarang is a concrete manifestation of the joint international conference between the Faculty of Economics and Business, Soegijapranata Catholic University and the School of Economics and Business, University of San Carlos, Cebu, Philippines. The conference is attended by approximately 70 presenters from four different countries and 120 participants involving academics, practitioners, students and government agencies. This activity is an appropriate platform for sharing research results and practical experiences in Economics and Business areas as well as tool for scientific publications for lecturers and students. We hope that this international conference will be conducted continuously and involve more parties so that the process of scientific dissemination in Economic and Business will be wider.

Finally, we hope that the various collaborative activities carried out as the realization of the MOU between the Faculty of Economics and Business, Soegijapranata Catholic University and the School of Economics and Business, University of San Carlos, Cebu will continue and involve more parties. We believe this event will bring benefits not only for the two universities but also many parties and will be able to disseminate research results to the wider community, as well as for the nation and state. Last but not least, welcome to this conference. We hope you will enjoy this conference and will also enjoy the beauty of Semarang and Central Java Province.

Thank you.

Welcome participants and presenters from various Universities and State Colleges to the 5th International Conference for Business and Economy 2019!

According to reports made by the Association of South-East Asian Nations, the establishment of the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) in 2015, is viewed as a major milestone in the regional economic integration agenda, offering opportunities in the form of a huge market of US$ 2.6 trillion and over 622 million people.

AEC’s primary purpose is to work together as one, in ensuring the region’s end goal of economic integration. The AEC envisions ASEAN as a single market and production base, a highly competitive region with equitable economic development, and fully integrated into the global economy.

Most funded researches related to the AEC includes measuring its progress; security competition and vision of ASEAN; competition law; and ASEAN’s resiliency as one community. Singapore’s AEAN Chairmanship, as reported in the current ASEAN Economic Integration Brief, signals the region’s commitment to foster its collective future-readiness. Thus, research interests relating to the need for a more interconnectedness of the various works across the pillars of the ASEAN Community is growing. The three pillars of the ASEAN Community, namely the ASEAN Political Security Community (APSC), the ASEAN Economic Community(AEC) and the ASEAN Socio Cultural Community (ASCC), must work harmoniously with rhythmic cooperation and/or coordination for the AEC to efficiently and rapidly move forward towards its end goal.

The conference brings together industry, academe, government and non-government leaders to share their researches and valuable thoughts about the conference theme, though a plenary session followed by parallel sessions. ICBE 2019 serves as venue for researchers to present documentation of such efforts and researches related to the fulfillment of, and the articulation of the existence of ASEAN. Around 60 academic research papers will be presented over the 2 day conference, with the following topics and sub-topics: Management of Technology and Innovation with sub-topics in Management Innovation, and on Industry 4.0; Resource Management and Sustainable Development, with sub-topics in Sustainable Tourism, Green Business, UNWTO’s Sustainable Development Goals; Accounting, Business Law, Economics, and Finance; Governance and Corporate Social Responsibility; ASEAN Economic Community: Challenges and Prospects, with sub-topic on the ASEAN MRAs

In behalf of the organizing committee, scientific committee, University of San Carlos, Cebu City, Philippines, and Soegijapranata Catholic University, Semarang, Indonesia, we thank you for choosing to participate in 2019 ICBE.
