

CHAPTER 5

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1. Conclusion

This chapter presents the conclusion of the analysis of the data collected from the questionnaire. This study was done to find out the degree of motivation that the santris of pesantren Askhabul Kahfi Gunungpati in learning English. From the data analysis, it clearly shows that the santris of pesantren Askhabul Kahfi Gunungpati had moderate degree of both integrative and instrumental motivation. The santris were moderately motivated in learning English because they had their reasons in it. They had moderate degree of integrative motivation because they might want to be a part of some specific cultural societies and they wanted to have some intimacy in it (Ellis, 1997). Meanwhile, the santris had moderate degree of instrumental motivation because they wanted to have financial gain and they wanted to be accepted in the targeted companies they like.

This research also identified all as 4 factors suggested by Wimolmas (2012). They were the classroom situation , the teachers' way of teaching, the supportive teachers and the material difficulties, where the respondents admit that the teacher's way of teaching and the supportive teachers are considered the dominant factors, implying that teachers'role may be the most determining factor in the process of learning English in the context of Pesantren. Without necessarily ignoring other three factors identifiable through this research, this finding has an implication on the need for the Pesantren to give more attention to the provision of qualified teachers in the current and future learning and teaching processes in particular where English learning is concerned.

5.2. Suggestion

The writer realized that this study is far from perfect because of the limitation of the data. The weakness of this study is that the writer limited the respondents and that the questionnaire was made in close-ended which means that they could not add other information in it. The writer wants to suggest the next researchers who want to make a research about the motivation in learning a new language. For further research, the next researchers can add more instruments such as interview to the targeted respondents to validate the survey. Moreover, they can also go to other pondok pesantren so that the result would be varied. This way, the result would be more effective and valid and they can deliver new information for the readers.
