INTRODUCTION BACKGROUND OF THE STUDY Language is a significant medium for human beings in order to communicate, share information, share knowledge, express ideas, demonstrate feelings, and give opinions. It is also one of the most important elements in building a good connection and relationship with other people. In short, people use language every day to communicate with others and to express themselves in a social relationship that enables them to take part in a variety of activities. ADDIN (Agha, 2006): Even when people think that they are not using language or when they are not talking, they are actually using language. Without realizing, people are still thinking, arranging words in their brain, or using signs, or body language to express their purposes. For this reason, the writer shall argue that language plays a major role in human life and the reason the world keeps running. Thousands of languages are spoken by people all over the world. Each country, even each tribe, has its own language. Thus, everyone in this world understands at least one language. Among all languages, there is one most spoken language that is considered as the most essential language in the world is English. ADDIN (Mahu, 2012). English has become an International language these days. It can help people with different mother tongues to talk to each other. In Indonesia, English is a
