Let's have a discussion

- What contextual border crossing experience are you possibly going to share to your students?
- Are you confident enough to recount it? Why?

- What idea are you basically going to put across?
- How are you going to do it?

Conclusion

Contextual border crossing recount using

English as its medium is an advantageous method for us to increase our students' intercultural communicative competence (ICC).

So, it's a worth-trying approach, guys. It gives you a double benefit, the opportunity to practice your English and increase your students' ICC simultaneously.
